Women In Israel Receive Full Equality Before Law

Full equality for women in Israel was achieved when the Knesset (Parliament) passed the Women's Equal Rights Bill during an extraordinary session called specifically to consider this law. The bill passed with a large majority which included Rabbi Judah Leib Maimon, Minister of Religion, and the Hapoel Hamizrachi (Religious Workers) group within the Religious Bloc. The Agudat Israel (Ultra-Orthodox) section within the Religious Bloc voted against the measure, and Mapam (Left-Wing Labor) abstained.

Essentially the same bill proposed by the Government at the first reading, the final draft of the law, for which forty minority amendments were rejected, leaves the question of marriage and divorce under the jurisdiction of the religious courts, although it provides that divorce must have the agreement of both parties. For Jews, serious offense must be proved before a man can divorce his wife without her consent. Women are now granted full equality before the law. A clause of the new law invalidates all discriminatory clauses embodied in other laws. Bigamy is outlawed for Jewish and Christian communities. Husbands abandoning their wives may be imprisoned for up to five years. Parents are equal in their rights as natural guardians of their offspring; custody in case of the death of a single parent is automatically vested in the surviving parent.

Married women are now entitled to hold property in their own right whether acquired before or after marriage. In matters of inheritance, the new law overrules religious statutes which discriminate against women. It provides that

Was Loved For Wisdom And Welfare Work

Jacob S. Eisinger, a member of the Stock Exchange firm of Cohen, Simonson & Co., 120 Broadway, and a leader in settlement work, died in New York at his home, 40 West Seventy-seventh Street. He would have been 57 years old this month. For thirty-five years Mr. Eisinger was identified with the University Settlement at 184 Eldridge Street on the lower East Side. He was head worker for eight years and in 1946 became chairman of the Council.

When the settlement, the oldest social agency of its kind in the United States, celebrated its sixtieth anniversary in 1946, Mr. Eisinger recalled that Eleanor Roosevelt as a young woman taught gymnastics and dancing there. Mrs. Roosevelt was guest of honor and received an award at the dinner marking the celebration. Numbered among the "boys" of the settlement were Elmer Rice, Edward G. Robinson, Jacob Epstein, Irving Caesar, Jimmy Cagney, Eddie Cantor, and Nat Holman.

Mr. Eisinger was closely identified with the work of the Fieldston School and the United Neighborhood Houses, and was a trustee of the Ethical Culture Society. He was a member of the Board of Governors of the New York Curb Exchange. Born in Austria, Mr. Eisinger was brought to the U. S. as a child. He attended Fordham University and New York Law School. For a number of years he practiced law.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Rose Sapir Eisinger, and a son, Robert. Irving Ben Cooper, Chief Justice of the Court of Special Sessions, and a vice-chairman of the settlement Council, paid

British Ease Rules On Frozen Assets

In a move which will benefit a large number of Jewish refugees, the British government has liberalised its regulations concerning frozen Hungarian and Rumanian assets as a result of intervention by the World Jewish Congress. This action, making it considerably easier for Jews from those countries to unfreeze their assets in Britain, was announced in a letter from A. G. Bottomley, Secretary of State for Overseas Trade, to Sidney S. Silverman, Member of Parliament and member of the WJCongress Executive.

The British move came after Mr. Silverman and Dr. F. R. Bienenfeld, legal advisor of the WJCongress, had protested against the strict interpretation of the British regulation under which such assets were released to victims of Fascist persecution only if they could prove that they had been "deprived of liberty." The British official, accepting the WJCongress claim that "labor service" constituted deprivation of liberty, wrote: "I am glad to be able to tell you that we have decided to treat both persons who were required to perform civilian and those performing military labor service as coming within the terms of the concession relating to deprivation of liberty. In doing this, we shall not seek to impose any initial date as determining when the military labor service became punitive in character, but we shall deal with all the cases on the same footing irrespective of the date when the so-called service began."

The WJCongress had also criticized the British position that imprisonment for a short period did not actually represent deprivation of liberty. Pointing to cases where arrests were made solely to put pressure on the individual either to surrender his property or [illegible]

[illegible] importance than the fact that the victim was held under the threat of loss of life or of continuing imprisonment.

Agreeing with this view, too, Mr. Bottomley wrote: "We are impressed by this contention and we have re-examined a number of cases in which these conditions obtain, and you will be glad to learn that we have decided to release in cases where we are satisfied that the victim was held in custody in circumstances of immediate danger." The British official also accepted other WJCongress recommendations. His new position is expected to lead to a reconsideration of many claims already turned down and to a favorable decision in pending applications.

Iran Lifts Expulsion Decree

Iran has agreed to ameliorate substantially the condition of refugees in that country, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees announced at Geneva, Switzerland.

The threat of expulsion on August 13 of persons not possessing valid passports was removed. "Bona fide" refugees under the High Commissioner's mandate will be allowed to reside in Iran without any special dateline for their departure. Also, the High Commissioner has received permission to appoint a representative in Iran to issue travel documents to refugees who desire to migrate.

This is the first time that the United Nations High Commissioner's office, or any other international agency, has succeeded in getting such a favorable response to appeals on behalf of stateless persons in a country in which their legal position had become untenable.

Marcel de Baer, a Belgian judge now on the staff of the International Refugee Organization, negotiated the arrangements with the Iranian Government, which, he said, despite the tension involved in the oil crisis, "took the greatest interest in the cause of the refugees."

In a move that appeared to most Western observers to have been directed at Iraqi Jews living in Iran, the Teheran Government issued a decree last February that would have forced persons not possessing valid passports either to become Iranian citizens or get out. The Jews' exodus began and is continuing. But the resources of Israel and private Jewish organizations were not large enough to move out the people at the

H.I.A.S. To Prolong Aid In DP Areas

The board of directors of HIAS, the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, voted in New York to prolong for one year its full-scale activities in Germany and Austria, after the International Refugee Organization goes out of existence in the DP areas on January 1, 1952. The action was taken after Isaac L. Asofsky, executive director, reported his findings in the DP areas during a survey he made abroad. HIAS was scheduled to curtail its activities in the former enemy countries simultaneously with the discontinuance of the IRO.

However, Mr. Asofsky reported that about 25,000 Jews will remain homeless and amidst "hostile surroundings" and will require immigration aid in the year following the cessation of IRO activities. He said that because of the anticipated loss of IRO aid in defraying transportation costs of immigrants, HIAS will, in 1952, face increasing financial obligations in its operations in Germany and Austria. He was asked by the board of Directors to prepare an estimated budget for these activities, which will be included in the Society's overall estimated global expenses for 1952.

Although there has been a tapering off of the DP program in Europe, there was, during the past six months, a sharp increase in requests for immigration aid from refugees and citizens of Western European countries. About 100,000 Jews in Western Europe now are waiting for resettlement opportunities. Of these, about 60,000 are in France; 25,000 in Germany and Austria; and about 6,000 in Holland and Belgium.

Because more than 15,000 DP Jews in Germany and Austria will not be able to qualify for immigration to the United States during the next six months, before the expiration of the DP Act, Mr. [illegible] immigration to Canada and Australia, lands where immigration restrictions were recently relaxed. An additional 4,000 applications for immigration to these countries have already been accepted by this newly-created Bureau, and are being processed for presentation to the missions of the two countries now screening applicants in the DP areas.

HIAS concern with the large number of refugees in France is "receiving the Society's all-out attention". Recently, Lewis Neikrug, HIAS overseas director was successful in making arrangements with the French Ministry of Labor for the granting of working permits to refugees in that country during their temporary stay. However, in Belgium, the identification cards of refugees are still stamped "must emigrate" and in vastly overpopulated Holland, where emigration is encouraged by the Government, even for its own nationals, more Jews were helped

Christians Urge U.S. Aid To Israel

The American Christian Palestine Committee, with headquarters at 41 East Forty-second Street, New York, appealed to the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives to extend financial aid to Israel "fully commensurate with its great needs and great potentialities." The appeal was made by Dr. Henry A. Atkinson, honorary chairman and founder of the committee; the Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, co-chairman; Dr. Samuel Guy Inman, vice chairman; and Dr. Carl Herman Voss, chairman of the executive committee.

The four presented their views in a statement submitted to Representative James P. Richards, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, in which they urged support of the McCormack-Martin and Douglas-Taft bills to authorize a $160,000,000 grant-in-aid to Israel. Miss Bess Myerson, a bond official, and Albert Schaneer, Brooklyn bond chairman of the Zionist Organization of America, also urged support of the drive.

Meanwhile, Borough President John Cashmore of Brooklyn, speaking at an outdoor rally for State of Israel Bonds in Sea Gate, Coney Island, asserted that "in these days of hypertension in the Middle East, support of the $500,000,000 Independence Bond Issue floated by the State of Israel is an essential contribution to democracy and the strengthening of the western position."

World Jewish Congress Charges Ex-Nazis In Foreign Office Of West German Republic

A number of notorious ex-Nazis have been appointed to positions of influence in the new Foreign Office of the West German Republic, the World Jewish Congress revealed, after an investigation into the organization of West Germany's Foreign Office and diplomatic corps. Many of these men served in the Nazi Foreign Office under Von Ribbentrop and were trained by him, the WJCongress survey disclosed, pointing out that this Ministry was proven guilty at the Nuremberg trials of plotting for aggressive war and collaborating in genocide.

The investigation, undertaken with the aid of the W. J. Congress staff in Germany, also revealed that these new officials include men who themselves cooperated in the mass murder of Jews, plundered works of art, and committed other crimes. The WJCongress probe revealed that ex-Nazis have been appointed not only to secondary posts in the Foreign Office but also to top-level positions, and that the new Foreign Office had intentions of appointing ex-Nazis to the five highest posts in the Political Department, three of the five top positions in the Bureau of Protocol and the five highest offices in the "Peace Bureau."

Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, director of the WJCongress Department of International Affairs, said the facts constituted another demonstration that the Western Allied decision to end the state of war against Germany was premature. "The records of these men are clear and known to all," Dr. Perlzweig declared. "The numbers of men involved make it impossible to believe that the appointments were accidental, while the fact that Dr. Adenauer, Prime Minister of West Germany, is also Foreign Minister shows that the highest level of administration cannot escape responsibility for these appointments. A government which sees nothing immoral in naming ex-Nazis to positions of importance in its Foreign Ministry is not worthy of democracy's trust."

The appointment of these ex-Nazis, he added, is in striking contrast with the recent statement by the Federal Government that the Foreign Office would appoint cultured and basically democratic men, a new type of diplomats who would be able to enlist understanding and sympathy for the new Germany. These appointments form only one aspect of a steady and systematic renazification of German life," Dr. Perlzweig said.

WOMEN IN ISRAEL

in questions of inheritance of both movable and immoveable property, male and female heirs have equal rights where no will exists, and the secular inheritance ordinance is applicable in such cases. A motion was supported by the Knesset's women members to eliminate the use of the word "ba'al," the Hebrew word for husband, meaning literally "master." This was upheld and instead of the name "ba'al" for husband, in law the word "ish," meaning "man" as well as husband, is used.

WORLD JEWISH

pointing out former Nazis occupy important posts in practically all branches of governmental administration, that hundreds of Nazis occupy teaching posts in German schools and universities and that industrialists who supported Hitler hold key positions in the German economy once again. "It becomes clearer by the day," he said, "that the German power which the Allied world is helping to rebuild and to rearm will not, in the end, support Western civilization."

The WJCongress study showed that many appointments to the Foreign Office were made in secrecy, and the Federal Government has refused to give the German public an account of its progress in organizing the Foreign Office. This has met with protests from the democratic press in Germany, but the policy of secrecy has not changed. Because of this policy, it is impossible to determine the exact number of Nazis in the Foreign Office, but the WJ Congress study uncovered the following appointments:

William Melchers, vice-chief of the Department of Personnel, who will have considerable authority in the appointment of other Foreign Office officials. Holding the rank of Ministerial Counsellor in the Nazi Foreign Office, he was head of the Near Eastern Division of the Foreign Office Political Department from 1939 to 1945. As such, one of his responsibilities was liaison with the ex-Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, who fomented trouble in Palestine and elsewhere in the Near East and among Yugoslav Moslems from Berlin during the war. Melchers supplied the Mufti with funds.

Dr. Kurt Heinburg, Foreign Office official assigned to work on economic and personnel problems. He too held the rank of Ministerial Counsellor under the Nazis and, as director of the Eastern European division of the Foreign Office, he was instrumental in persecution of the Jews of Yugoslavia and other Balkan countries and co-signed many of the documents dealing with deportation of Jews to death camps.

Dr. Hans Schwarzmann, member of the Foreign Office's Department for Personnel. Appointed to the Nazi Foreign Office in 1937, he became the personal liaison man between Nazi Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Otto Abetz, Nazi Ambassador in France. Most of the reports on the sad fate of the French Jewry went through his hands, and there are no documents to show that he made any protest. A personal friend of Von Ribbentrop, he was present at family dinners.

Werner von Bargen, member of the Foreign Office's Legal Department. Von Bargen, who joined the Nazi Party on May 1, 1933, was the Foreign Office's representative to the Military High Command for Occupied Belgium. As such, he kept the Foreign Office informed concerning deportation of Jews from Belgium to death camps and, in several reports, he expressed his dissatisfaction over the escape of a number of Jews.

Hasso von Etzdorf, assigned to the Legal Department. Liaison man between Nazi Secretary of State for Foreign affairs von Weissaecker and the German General Staff, he was responsible for the plunder of many works of art from occupied countries. It was also learned that Herbert von Strempel, first secretary of the Nazi Embassy in Washington from 1938 until the outbreak of war between Germany and the U. S. in 1941, has been appointed as permanent deputy to the new German Minister to Brazil. In his post in America, von Strempel collaborated closely with Nazi agents and propagandists in the U. S., and reportedly paid them considerable amounts from secret funds.

Ex-Nazis appointed to posts of importance in the new Foreign Office also include a Dr. Mohr, who cooperated in the deportation of Jews from Amsterdam to the Mauthausen death camp; a Dr. von Rintelen, who gave the order regarding the "special treatment" (i.e., annihilation) of the Jews deported from Rumania; a Dr. Von Grundherr, who cooperated in the Nazi mass extermination campaign; Dr. Theo Kordt, former Nazi official; and a Dr. Beeker, former Gestapo member.

CANADIAN SPORTS PARADE

FOR over two decades the modest backbone of the Argonaut Football Club has been a slim, iron-grey haired trainer named George Aspinal Stockwell. Riding the fortunes of the Double Blue through feast and famine, Stockwell has likely tended more football immortals than any man in Canada. An expert physiotherapist, George Stockwell, nevertheless, learned his training methods through actual, on-the-spot experience. Although he has specialized solely in football during the last fifteen years, he trained a varied collection of athletes in his earlier years. In 1924 George bandaged the celebrated Maitlands' lacrosse team with Lionel Conacher, Livingston and company; he trained sculler Johnny Coulson and the great Australian oarsman H. B. (Bobby) Pearce in their prime, and in the early thirties tended the aches and pains of the West Toronto Memorial Cup hockey winners.

The Best Argos

Having served the Argonaut teams almost consecutively from 1929 to the present time, George Stockwell took time out during World War II to serve with a field ambulance unit and was discharged with the rank of Regimental Sergeant-Major in 1945. That year, too, he read his name on the King's list, awarding him an M.B.E.

George Aspinal Stockwell has two favourite Argonaut teams which he elevates above all others. First, he chooses the great 1938 squad with Tommy Burns, Teddy Morris, Ab Box and the rest and then proudly adds the 1950 Grey Cup champions. Stockwell likes to point out a surprising coincidence about these two teams in that they both defeated Winnipeg for the Dominion Championship by a score of 13 to nothing.

Asked about the greatest American and Canadian Argo players to go through his hands, George picked two of the 1950 Americans as the best, respectively, on defense and offense... Buckets Hirsch and Uly Curtis. And, of the dozens of great Canadian players, Stockwell mentioned two as the outstanding exponents of the game ... Art West and Teddy Morris.

"That Morris was a terrific team player," said Stockwell. "He never weighed more than 160 pounds at any time, but if he could find even a twelve-inch hole in the enemy line he'd be through like a miniature battering ram. And, in all the games Ted Morris played he never once bothered to come to my rubbing table although sometimes, after a game, he was so shaken up he could hardly find his street clothes in the dressing room!"

The Iron Mask

In 1933, George Stockwell worked with several Toronto doctors in perfecting a playing-mask to enable the great Argo kicker, Ab Box, to continue playing although Box had sustained a broken jaw against Montreal.

"Designing that mask was quite a task," stated Stockwell. "It had to be stationary during play. It had to be made in such a way that it didn't hinder vision or hearing and yet Ab's face had to be protected and supported. We made several before the famous Iron Mask emerged. We must have been successful for it helped Ab Box and was then loaned out to many teams in Canada and even found its way over to the States several times."

Another Generation

The latest Stockwell to appear on the Argonaut training scene is young, 17-year-old Bill Stockwell who was made assistant to his Dad this year. Originally, this plan had called for the appointment of Stockwell's eldest son, George Jr., but he was killed while serving with the RCAF over Singapore in 1943.

Now, with his son in tow, George Sr. presides over the 1951 Argonauts as the RSM in charge of training and injury, and the team abides by the stern rulings of this regimental gentleman.

While he turns over the parade to "Colonel" Frank Clair, Stockwell's unspoken command rings across the Dominion Champions' training field.

CLASS IN COOKERY

PRIZE PECAN BUTTERSCOTCH COOKIES

two cups flour
five teaspoons baking powder
one-half teaspoon salt
seven-eighths cup of skim milk
three tablespoons butter

Sift dry ingredients twice, cut in butter, then add milk slowly while stirring with knife. Place on lightly floured board, and roll out one-quarter inch thick.

Filling

one-quarter cup butter
chopped pecans
two-thirds cup brown sugar

Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and combine well. Spread mixture on dough, and sprinkle with chopped pecan nuts. Roll up like jelly roll; cut in one-inch slices, and place in greased muffin tin with cut side up. Bake in 425 degrees oven for fifteen minutes.

Mrs. Meyer Jacobson,
30 Menin Road, Toronto.

TROPICAL CHIFFON SPONGE CAKE

In one large mixing bowl, sift together: two and one-quarter cups cake flour; one and one-half cups sugar, three teaspoons baking powder, and one teaspoon salt. Make a well in the dry ingredients, and add in order: one-half cup oil, five unbeaten egg-yolks; three-quarters cup cold water; and the grated rind of two oranges. Beat with mixing-spoon until very smooth. In a large, second bowl, put one cup egg whites, about seven or eight; and one-half teaspoon cream of tartar. Beat until whites form very stiff peaks, stiffer than for meringue. It is important not to underbeat. Gradually fold in egg-yolk mixture into beaten egg-whites, folding gently until well blended. Bake for about fifty-five minutes in a 325-degree oven, in two layer-cake tins.

Pineapple Coconut Icing

In top of double boiler, combine three egg whites, two and one-quarter cups sugar, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon cream of tartar, and one-half cup syrup from a tin of crushed pineapple. Beat for seven minutes over boiling water, until mixture is thick enough to spread; remove from heat, and continue beating until mixture is cool. Spread one-half of the icing, about one and one-half cups, between layers, and on sides. To the remainder, add one-half cup crushed pineapple, and spread on top.

Mrs. I. Cohen,
4941 Van Horne Avenue, Montreal.

This recipe won first prize in its class in the contest sponsored by Montreal's Laurentian Chapter Number 520, Bnai Brith Women.

The Attitude Toward Germans And Germany

The disturbed and threatening international situation has produced a changed attitude toward Germany among the Governments of the Western democracies. For some time the countries occupying Western Germany—Britain, the United States and France—have been criticised for their lenient treatment of former members of the Nazi party, which went so far in leniency as to appoint some of them to important industrial and even political posts. The reason given for these appointments, in answer to the criticism, was that only among former Nazis could men be found with the requisite experience and ability.

Neither the criticism nor the answer seem to take sufficient account of the fact that every former Nazi, like every former sinner, must be judged by his present state of mind. The obvious difficulties in the way of such a judgment do not dismiss the obligation. A penitent sinner is entitled to consideration for his repentance; the task is to appraise its sincerity.

The argument for individual judgments on former members of the Nazi party is strengthened when applied to all Germans. Not all Germans approved the Nazi barbarities and murders. The sins of a nation may justifiably in some measure be laid on its individuals who did not openly try to prevent them. But the share of Germans individually in the collective sin of Nazi Germany does not conclude the matter. Here, too, the present attitude of the individual German comes in for consideration when judging him.

At the International Conference of Christians and Jews held in Oxford in July, 1946, the delegates were deeply impressed by the public, and patently sincere, confession of Germany's sin which was made by a German minister of the Lutheran Church. The President of Western Germany, Professor Heuss, has publicly acknowledged "Germany's collective shame." Other such confessions have been made in diverse contexts. They cannot fairly be brushed aside as of no account, certainly not as far as the individuals are concerned who made them.

Nazi Germany's terrible record of evil makes impossible the attitude of "let bygones be bygones." Nor can it be said, even if said with great and profound sorrow, let the past bury its dead; the cries of the dead persist, and the evil which wrought their death is kept in memory by its present consequences. When, therefore, it is suggested that individual Germans be judged by their present individual attitudes rather than by Germany's collective past, the suggestion does not imply that that past should be forgotten or ignored but that those who repent of their nation's sin be allowed to prove their repentance.

Jews, more than others, have cause for bitterness against Germans; they suffered from Nazism in ways and in a measure which burned the pain deeply into the Jews' consciousness. And the stories of persisting anti-Semitism aggravate the hurt which memory must harbour. It is in such a case that religion calls for spiritual heroism.

The question of the attitude which Jews should have towards Germany and Germans has recently arisen in several practical contexts. Plans for the defence of Western Europe include the proposal to re-arm Western Germany. The practical reasons for it seem to outweigh the practical arguments against it. The Israeli government opposes it, presumably out of a feeling of ineradicable distrust of Germany implanted by the Nazi treatment of the Jews. In any case, the subject is so bound up with the large issues affecting the future of civilisation and the spiritual and moral foundations of human society that all sectional considerations must give way to considerations of the larger need. France, hesitatingly and reluctantly, came to recognise that necessity.

The question of the right attitude to individual Germans has also been raised in Australia. The Australian government includes Germans in its immigration policy. Some Jewish organisations in Australia have protested against the admission of Germans; other Jews have dissociated themselves from that view. From the religious point of view it would seem obvious that Germans wishing to emigrate to Australia should be judged individually for their moral suitability as well as for their physical, intellectual or economic suitability.

Presumably not every German who wants to settle in Australia is admitted; surely the conditions for admission should include a moral qualification. Nazism was not only a political movement, it was an attack on the moral foundations of democracy. Its adherents joined in a conspiracy against morality; only those who have repented may claim forgiveness.

Those Nazis who have been imprisoned for their guilty share in Nazi aggression and in the Nazis' barbarities are in a different category. The trials which resulted in their conviction were instituted to defend, and to re-affirm, the moral principles of our civilisation. That was their justification. The verdicts declared that men who plot war commit a crime against humanity, and that men who conduct war with methods unrestrained by any considerations of humanity are criminals.

Morality has not changed since the Nuremberg trials and the other trials of Nazis accused of crimes against humanity. To deny by implication the moral principles which those trials affirmed would be a blow against the civilisation which the Western democracies must defend; not even the possible needs of that defence can justify it.

That the Germans should want to remove from their nation the stigma of guilt is understandable, that the German people should be allowed themselves to work off the stigma by clear evidence of penitence is right; but that the men who were most responsible for that stigma should be exonerated from their guilt would violate morality and cast another shadow over the future of humanity. Religion calls for forgiveness to the penitent, but it also calls for the firm maintenance of the moral principles which alone can guide humanity to peace and righteousness.

by HIAS to resettle in overseas countries during the first six months of this year, than during the entire 12 months of 1950.

In Israel, to which some 7,000 Rumanian Jews immigrated last year with the assistance of HIAS, the Society recently joined in the operation of a network of 40 shelters throughout the land, for the temporary maintenance of about 10,000 single men and women per year in accordance with the Jewish Agency's overall program of immigration and absorption of immigrants. The agreements, signed by Mr. Asofsky in Tel Aviv, call for an initial HIAS outlay of $600,000, much of which will go toward the program of altering and expanding the facilities of the 40 shelters.

Central Loan Fund in Israel, in which HIAS is involved in granting varying small loans without interest to newcomers, granted some 10,000 such loans during the past 18 months and all are being repaid regularly without a single default. Another HIAS activity in Israel which involved $500,000 of the Society's funds in making possible the reception and temporary maintenance of Polish immigrants at a camp near Tel Aviv, Mr. Asofsky said in his report, has already served some 10,000 immigrants in this category.

speed that Iranian decree would have required.

It now develops that many non-Jews were caught by the decree. In response to radio broadcasts informing stateless persons of a new chance for regularizing their position, M. de Baer located 1,200 individuals in a few days, less than half of whom were Jews. The others were Russians, Czechoslovaks and Poles, he said.

All are the kind of persons the High Commissioner is supposed to look after. More are expected to come forward out of the clandestinity into which they were forced by the Iranian decree.

Professor Hans Joachim Schoops, a German Evangelical theologian, has addressed a letter to Federal President Heuss at Bonn, in which he expressed grave concern over the mounting tide of neo-Nazism in the country. He was reluctant, he said, to advise the 15,000 Jews who had hoped to resume their lives in Germany to stay on in view of rampant Nazism.
